GREEN HORNET COMICS #7: 1942 SUPERHERO COMIC BY KARI A THERRIAN, FAMILY COMICS INC. PDF

The 1940s saw hundreds of comic book publishers come and go, with thousands of heroes and villains. For every name that is still remembered today there were a dozen forgotten, except maybe by a young boy or girl who will never forget that one comic, that one story. Such was the magic of the Golden Age of comics! The comic reprints from Golden Age Reprints and UP History and Hobby are reproduced from actual classic comics, and sometimes reflect the imperfection of books that are decades old. These books are constantly updated with the best version available - if you are EVER unhappy with the experience or quality of a book, return the book to us to exchange for another title or the upgrade as new files become available. Not only The Shadow knows what evil lurks in the hearts of men

By Uncle Mickey

With a popular radio show beaming excitement to fans all over the country, "The Green Hornet" didn't need much else in terms of promotion for his comic title. However, Harvey Publications turned loose a top-of-his-game Al Avison on the character and the result was sheer magic. Avison was also employed by Timely Comics, where he expertly handled the art chores on "Captain America" (or would have had to be left to his own devices), but there was no question which of the two popular features benefitted most from his talents. With Martin Goodman (Stan Lee's uncle) worried about losing his stalwart audience for Cap and Bucky, he was always interfering with Avison's work, pushing the artist to hue closely to the groundbreaking style of Joe Simon & Jack Kirby, the team that created the star-spangled character. If Goodman had the sense to look at Avison's Hornet or even just Bob Powell's "Spirit of '76," he might have noticed that the exact "formula" he wanted was already racking in the dimes for competitor Alfred Harvey, who left his artists to please themselves and, thus, the comic-buying audience. Thanks to Golden Age Reprints and Amazon, these terrific books are within our grasp once again. And hoo-wee, what fun it is!!
